ABSTRACT

A method provides access to a software application that includes an application core and version-specific functionality. The method includes enabling access to the application core, determining a version of the software application, and providing a module link that 5 corresponds to the version. The module link may be a software interface that enables access to the version-specific functionality.

20747181.doc